All the advantages of Typefi Publish and Typefi NLM on a hosted server solution.

Focus on publishing, not infrastructure

Typefi Cloud lets you manage your publications while we look after the infrastructure. We host the server running the Typefi Publish Engine, and you look after the content and the design on your user desktops. Your files are stored and backed up on the server, and available for you to download for preview and delivery. All you need to do is work out how many users and projects you have so that we can provide you with the right hosted service.

Not all service needs are the same

That's why Typefi Cloud offers different levels of service. You choose the service according to the number of users you have – from 1 user to an unlimited number of users – as well as by the number of different publishing projects needed.

Publish as often and in as many formats as you need – for one project or many

With Typefi Cloud, a publishing project is defined by your content structure. You can use different style templates and output (job) options from within one project to publish that content to print, accessible PDF, ePub and so on. If you publish different types of content with completely different structures – for example, textbooks, sales brochures and journals – then you will probably need more than one project.

See our feature list (on back), or talk to one of our sales team about which service is right for you.

Spread your publishing costs out over the year

Typefi Cloud is offered as a monthly subscription service, so you can manage your cash flow.
